

Home-Based Crisis Intervention (HBCI)

Northside's Home-Based Crisis Intervention (HBCI) provides immediate, intensive mental and behavioral health support to children, young adults, and families experiencing a mental health crisis. By delivering services in the home, school, and community, HBCI helps stabilize urgent situations, reduce the need for hospitalization, prevent unnecessary ACS involvement or family separation, and keep children safely at home whenever possible. HBCI helps families navigate emergencies, build resilience, and maintain long-term stability by providing crisis intervention, safety planning, care coordination, and ongoing therapeutic support.

Our HBCI therapist was available around the clock when my child was struggling. I really valued the dedication and care that was provided to my family to make sure my child stayed home and avoided hospitalization. I felt supported and that we were not alone in a crisis.
